This seems rather redundant from above, but here: Christine Salls. Monitor calibration, choosing a camera, choosing a lens, choosing a tripod, composition, DSLR basics, intro to photography, light modifiers, RAW or JPG, setting up a simple home studio, studio lighting, understanding exposure, presentations on some of the "great" photographers.

I'd be willing to share some thoughts on the business side of photography if people are interested - or maybe partnering with another member on that topic since every business will do things a little differently. (Heather Reinhart)

We should encourage more people to share the techniques used to capture an image if it involved some set up Gradient filters, reflectors, more than one light, etc. More than just a snapshot photo.

I really enjoy the camera club as it is, but sometimes it seems we spend a little too much time going over people's subitted photos on the monthly subject. We should limit that to maybe 3-4 images per person to keep things moving.
